

RFDS 1.00 TITLE, AUTHORITY, AND APPLICABILITY

1.1; REDMOND FIRE CODE

The Redmond Fire Code is comprised of the state and locally adopted model code (UFC) and locally adopted regulations. While it is the intent of the City of Redmond to be consistent with regional, state, and national good practice the City of Redmond is responsible for the evaluation of risk and benefit regarding the public health, safety, and welfare. As such the city has exercised and continues to reserve its right to institute local rules and regulations governing the development and use of businesses, operations, occupancies, and structures. These locally adopted codes and adopted model codes and references are found in the Redmond Community Development Guide, section 20E. 80.000.

1.2; REDMOND FIRE DEPARTMENT STANDARDS

It is the intent of the Redmond Fire Department to enforce the provisions of adopted codes in a manner which is consistent, fair, without undue burden, efficient, and beneficial to the short and long term health, safety and economic well being of the citizens, businesses, employees and visitors of our community. In meeting this intent and in accordance with the authority and jurisdiction defined in the Uniform Fire Code Article 1 the Redmond Fire Department Standards have been created. They are formulated as individual standards on specific topics as deemed necessary. Requirements found in the Uniform Codes, State Law, Community Development Guide, or other references are not generally repeated herein. Redmond Fire Department Standards have been adopted by definition and reference into the Redmond Community Development Guide 20 E.80.000 FIRE CODE. Redmond Fire Department Standards constitute the Redmond Fire Department's primary reference document.
